Discussion of Greek Vase Painting Styles

Discussion of Greek Vase Painting Styles usually begins with the geometric rather than its predecessors in and before the Trojan War era. The geometric period's designs, as the name suggests, tended to shapes like triangles or diamonds and lines later stick and sometimes more fleshed out figures emerged.

Corinthian Vase Painting of the Archaic Period

'Corinthian Vase Painting of the Archaic Period' by Darrell A. Amyx presents the study of Corinthian art in the archaic period. The book covers the transition from geometric to orientalizing styles and the emergence of archaic period temples employing the Doric and Ionic orders. The change in filling ornament is not merely the most striking of the innovations which we review on D.A. Amyx's "Corinthian Vase Painting of the Archaic Period".

Black Figure Painting

Black figure painting was used throughout the archaic period before diminishing under the popularity of red figure painting. Exekias is considered one of the most talented and influential black figure painters due to his ability to convey emotion, use intricate lines, and create scenes that trusted the viewer toprehend the scene.

Archaic Greek Art

Produced after the archaic period in Greece, it remained the primary style of vase painting until the late third century BC when a return to simpler forms and abstract images prevailed. Thus, red figure vase painting is considered the apex of Greek pottery production and is the source of some of the finest examples of vase art.

The Orientalizing Period

The orientalizing period followed the geometric period and lasted for about a century from 700 to 600 BCE. This period was distinguished by international influences from the ancient Near East, Egypt, and Asia Minor, each of which contributed a distinctive eastern style to Greek art. The orientalizing period essay by Thomas Hefner in the 'Archaic Period' also explores the development of vase painting in the orientalizing period.

The pottery of ancient Greece from c 1000 to c 400 BCE provides not only some of the most distinctive vase shapes from antiquity but also some of the oldest and most diverse representations of the cultural beliefs and practices of the ancient Greeks. Further pottery with its durability even when broken and lack of appeal to treasure hunters is one of the great archaeological survivors.

Orientalizing Period

May 11th, 2020 - In the archaic phase of ancient Greek art, the orientalizing period or orientalising is the cultural and art historical period that began during the later part of the 8th century BCE when there was a heavy influence from the more advanced art of the Eastern Mediterranean and ancient near East. The main sources were Syria and Assyria and to a lesser extent also Phoenicia and Egypt.
